

Because we the public own the airwaves and not the corporations, it is important to have policies that encourage diversity, not monopoly.

Democracy is dependent upon a truthful, independent, and diverse media. When 75% of all major media is already owned by 6 companies it is time to work towards a dissemination of power and an encouragement of diversity. These are the tennets upon which true democracy thrives. Please do not act in favor of corporate well-being. Concentrated ownership discourages democracy by squashing out smaller voices. Postpone this vote please.

Due to concentrated ownership, local radio stations no longer serve the local communities. Hugh McMullen
